HER ABILITY DOUBTED, WOMAN WINS SUCCESS AS AUCTIONEER

MISS LILLIAN LAGONARNSINO,
Only Woman Auctioneer in the World, Wins Refuted Male Critics
Who Doubt Her Success in This Field.

By Marian Hale.

WOODHAVEN, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Christmas is coming. Have you thought how your Christmas dinner table is going to look? Here's a lovely centerpiece of real linen—white, green and pink, a half dollar, a dollar and a half—a dollar seventy-five cents.

The first woman auctioneer has mounted the platform. She is young, pretty, businesslike. She is, in other words, Miss Lillian Lagonarsino, assistant to Charles Rose, Brooklyn merchant.

When Miss Lagonarsino told Brooklyn city officials that she wants to be an auctioneer, they were amazed.

"A lot of women," they said, "have an idea they would be auctioneers, but every single one failed. You don't think you're going to have any better luck?"

But Miss Lagonarsino was not thinking of luck.

"My boss," she explained, "is an auctioneer. He has to help. I have been in his shop for two years. I know all about the business. Why shouldn't I help him?"

The officials were dubious, but they gave her a license.

The next day Miss Lagonarsino mounted the platform. She is young, pretty, businesslike. She is, in other words, Miss Lillian Lagonarsino, assistant to Charles Rose, Brooklyn merchant.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Synder spent Christmas in Richmond with relatives.

Miss Alice Tyler, who is attending the Mary Wheeler School in Providence, R. I., spent some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Tyler at Siegen.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dane and Little Miss Mary Clarke Dane, of Richmond, the Misses Laurens, of Richmond, and Mrs. H. H. Hargrove, of Faunsdale, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Hayes Wolfe and Miss Elizabeth Reeves Wolfe have left for their home in Hopewell after a visit to Mrs. W. H. Jesse.
